Autumn Planting

1922

MOST Hardy Shrubs, Evergreens, and Herbaceous Perennials can be planted in the Autumn with as good results as in the Spring. The plants are established in the ground ready to take advantage of the earliest Spring weather, so that their first season's growth is complete.

The Autumn planting season usually begins in Mid-September and lasts until the ground freezes, about the end of November. This is a time of comparative leisure in the garden; planting done at this time relieves the rush of work in the Spring.

THE WINTER LANDSCAPE NEEDS EVERGREENS

WHEN trees and shrubs are bare and the ground is snow-covered, evergreens are a welcome touch of color in the landscape. The border or mass-planting in the home grounds seems to add warmth and brightness. In exposed situations, real protection from sweeping winds may be provided by well-placed planting of rugged native evergreen trees.

Our Landscape Department is ready with advice and suggestions in the selection and arrangement of such plantings. Plans and estimates are supplied when desired.

Picea excelsa—Norway Spruce

SPRUCES

THE Norway Spruce is one of the hardiest of our tall-growing evergreens. Its foliage is dense dark green. Planted in groups or as an individual specimen, it develops into a broad tall tree, its lower branches sweeping the ground.

From $1.25 to $5.00 each, according to variety and size.

PINES

For rapid-growing shelter the pines cannot be surpassed. The Red and Austrian Pines are long-neededled, deep green sorts, suitable for planting as individuals or in combination with other evergreens. Our native White Pine, with its silvery foliage and spreading branches, is equally good.

From 50 cents to $8.00 each, according to variety and size.

HARDY FLOWERS

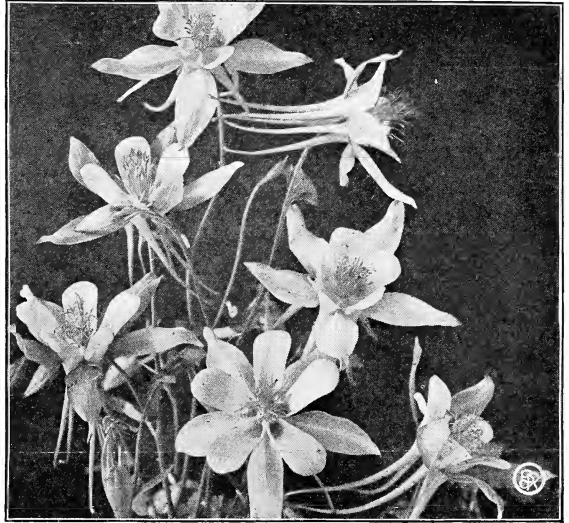

THE home grounds are incomplete without at least a few hardy flowers that occupy their place from year to year like familiar faces in the family circle. It is possible to make selections that will give blooms from early Spring to late Autumn. Practically all these Perennials are best planted now.

Our Special offer makes possible a real saving in the cost of planting (SEE OUTSIDE PAGE)

THE COLUMBINES

AMONG the earliest, these delicately-formed flowers greet the Spring. They may be planted in the open ground of the perennial border, or in sheltered corners of the rockery or wild garden. Their colors range from deep blue to white; one later variety is golden-yellow.

Aquilegia chrysantha—Columbine

Hardy Chrysanthemum "Yellow Queen"

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE latest of the hardy flowers. When heavy frosts have blackened and killed most of the herbaceous plants, the Chrysanthemums hold up their blossoms as though defying the oncoming Winter. Their colors are chiefly yellow, bronze, pink, and white, in both POMPON and BUTTON types.
